When Dr. Ketcham assumes his new office he will become the fifth president to lead Mount Union during the school's approximate century of service in higher education. The Cleveland churchman succeeds Dr. W. H. McMaster, who recently resigned after having completed nearly 30 years at the head of Mount Union. Dr. McMaster, now in Florida on leave of absence, will be named president emeritus at the close of the present school year in June.

The new president comes to Mount Union following 20 years of outstanding work in the fields of religious and educational service, having been a faculty member at Mount Union college and at Drew theological seminary and having served his church in several pastoral and executive capacities.

He was director of religious education at Trinity church in Youngstown during 1916-17 and during the following year was the first to fill the Cornelius Autman chair of English Bible at Mount Union college.

Dr. Ketcham served as chaplain in the first Division during the World war. After the armistice he became librarian and instructor of English Bible at Drew Theological seminary in Madison, N. J., and in 1920 he accepted the pastorate of the Grandview Methodist church in Columbus. In 1922 he was named pastor of Parkwood-Asbury Methodist church in Cleveland and in 1924 he accepted the position as pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in Oberlin. During his seven years in this position, he became well known for his leadership among young people.

From 1930 until 1937, Dr. Ketcham served as pastor of the First Methodist church in Warren. He was appointed district superintendent of the Methodist church for the Cleveland district at the last annual conference in 1937.

He is a trustee of Ohio Wesleyan university and has served as trustee of the North-East Ohio conference of the Methodist church since 1929. He became secretary of the latter group in 1933.

Dr. Ketcham is a member of the Masonic lodge, the American Legion, and the Fellowship of Reconciliation.

He was born in Mechanicsburg, Ohio, son of the late Rev. Merrick E. and Ada Burgess Ketcham. He was graduated from Toledo Central High school in 1908 and then attended Ohio Wesleyan university, from which he was graduated with

Men's Local

Fred Schaffer, representing Local No. 42, National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, today announced that the local has launched a boycott, in the Salem district, against Japanese-made goods.

Schaffer said that the Musicians and Carpenters locals, as well as the Moose lodge have endorsed the boycott.

A meeting will be held at 7:30 p. m. Thursday in the Moose lodge rooms when plans for the boycott will be outlined generally. The local has extended an invitation to all fraternal organizations and union labor groups, in addition to city officials, to be represented.

SALEM BATTLES FOR BERTH IN COURT FINALS

Tackles Akron St. Vincent
At 7 Tonight At Goodyear Gym

TWO OTHER TILTS ARE SCHEDULED

Pairings to Be Made Monday
For Finals at Columbus

Four Class A quintets and a pair of Class B teams held berths today in next weekend's state high school basketball tournament at Columbus, while 56 others still were in the scrap for the remaining 26 places, to be decided tonight.

Of paramount interest to Salem cage fans, of course, is the battle tonight at Akron between Salem High and Akron St. Vincent. The game, the first on the tournament schedule, is slated for 7 o'clock. It will be played at Goodyear gymnasium.

Doped to take a trimming, the Quakers Thursday night upset the tournament forecasters by lopping off Akron North, Rubber City champions. If the Quakers win tonight, they'll qualify for the finals competition at Columbus.

Salem Fans to "Sit In"

Because of the importance of the game, one of the largest delegations of Salem fans ever to take the road is expected to converge on Akron tonight.

Two other tilts will follow the Salem-Akron play. Euclid Shore will meet Akron East and Warren will tangle with Akron Buchtel. Euclid Shore moved into the finals by topping Akron Garfield, 20-19, while Akron East was eliminating Scienceville, 28-17. Youngstown East took Akron West into camp by a 29-26 count and qualified for the finals.

At the Dayton tournament Hamilton remained on the road to the state meet by defeating Dayton Fairmount, 35 to 25. In the northwest, Toledo Woodward nosed out Libbey and Bowling Green downed Napoleon.

Eight of last year's 16 Class A entrants are still in the race today, including Canton McKinley, which has clinched its berth. Others, besides Salem and Hamilton, who are making a bid for their second consecutive trip to Columbus are Marietta, Cincinnati, Hughes, Newark, Warren and Bridgeport.

Make Pairings Monday

Pairings for next week's state championship play will be made at 10 a. m. Monday. The method of drawing will prevent teams from the same district meeting in the first round.

Thursday's Class B games will be played at Ohio State's gymnasium, starting at 1 and 4 p. m., while Class A games will be in the state fairgrounds coliseum. Friday's contests in both classes will be at the same hours in the coliseum, while Saturday's semi-finals start at 1 p. m. and the finals at 8 p. m. There will be no consolation tournament.

Each squad, consisting of 10 players, coach and faculty manager, will receive traveling expenses of

Engineer's Force Is Happy Today As "The Ghost" Walks

LISBON, March 12.—The ghost in the shape of an opinion from Prosecutor Karl Stouffer—walked today for 660 employees of the county engineer's office who yesterday glumly passed a payless pay day while officials debated the legality of paying them.

The issue was another ramification of the contested engineer's post in which Lloyd Kirk, Republican incumbent, holds office under a legal barrage which Democrats hope will drive him from his entrenchment.

Auditor John Irwin, whose office issues the pay vouchers, questioned the legality of payment without authorization of the county commissioners. The matter was brought to the attention of the prosecutor who later contacted commissioners and received authorization to pay all but Judson Canfield, assistant engineer.

Pay checks will be issued to James Thurston of Lisbon, county superintendent and George Cline, Lisbon, assistant superintendent. These men, with Mr. Canfield, were mentioned in an earlier ruling requiring commissioner authorization before payment.

BRITISH 'PAPER PROTESTS' LOSE

Trampled Under Marching
Feet of Nazi Army
In Austria

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, March 12.—The British cabinet met today to face the cold fact that England's "paper protests" had been trampled under the marching feet of Hitler's army in Austria and might meet the same fate with respect to Czechoslovakia.

Ministers filed past a small, silent Downing street crowd for their extraordinary meeting with the realistic prime minister, Neville Chamberlain.

It was all too clear that Great Britain's words of protest came far too late to save Austria from Nazi domination and that the ministers must make up their minds now whether to forge a solid front with France and Czechoslovakia to prevent the same kind of march to the east.

Demand Answer

Furious government opposition demanded that Chamberlain answer the question of Czechoslovakia's future and answer it quickly.

Arthur Henderson, Laborite, served notice he would ask the premier in commons Monday whether Great Britain would pledge armed aid to France in the event France is attacked while trying to save Czechoslovakia from German domination.

Minister of Foreign Affairs Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German statesman who heard the useless British protest against subjugation of Austria, remained at the German embassy awaiting results of the cabinet meeting. Special police patrolled the street outside.

After the cabinet session, Clement Attlee, leader of the labor opposition, was called to the foreign office, where Lord Halifax gave him the government's information on the situation. It was believed he was consulted on important decisions pending.

Baron Georg Franckenstein, the Austrian minister, also was called into consultation with Lord Halifax.

This communique was issued after the cabinet meeting:

"The cabinet discussed the events in Austria and it was reported to it that a protest in the strongest terms had been made in Berlin.

Previously the prime minister and foreign secretary had made similar representations to Herr von Ribbentrop.

"It felt the action of the German government was bound to have the

City Wins Suit

LISBON, March 12.—A common pleas court jury late Friday afternoon returned a verdict for the City of East Liverpool in a damage action filed by Oscar A. Reynolds of that city, asking $10,000 for a sidewalk accident.

Reynolds claimed permanent leg injuries resulted from a fall on the Avondale street sidewalk occurring March 19, 1937. He asserted the city was at fault in leaving the sidewalk in bad repair and allowing ice to accumulate at the point of the accident.

The plaintiff declared injuries to his right leg have crippled him.

AUSTRIA GOES NAZI; FUEHRER IN LINZ TODAY

German Leader Expected
To Reach Capital of State Tonight

GERMAN BOMBERS ROAR IN SKIES

Arthur Seyss-Inquart Is Set Up As New Chancellor

(By Associated Press)
VIENNA, March 12.—Adolf Hitler returned in triumph to his native Austria today while the Austrian nation with mixed feelings began to learn what it means to be under Nazi control.

The Fuehrer of Germany made his entry into Linz at 4:13 p. m. (10:13 in Salem), a few hours behind his troops and airplanes. All the villages of Upper Austria through which he passed turned out as the Austrian-born leader of Nazidom moved toward Vienna.

Scores of German bombers and other military planes brought German soldiers into the suburbs of Vienna.

Say It Like This:

NEW YORK, March 12.—This is how the last name of the new Austrian chancellor, Seyss-Inquart, is pronounced: Zice (as in nice) Inkwart.

They remained there awaiting the Fuehrer's triumphal entry into the capital of the state which has come under his power, expected tonight.

German bombers flew over Vienna. Citizens, face upwards, shouted stormy greetings as the machines circled slowly over the capital.

German officials, too, were here. Austria over night became German and Nazi.

The New Chancellor

Hitler's close friend, 45-year-old bespectacled sandy-haired Arthur Seyss-Inquart, was the new chancellor, as well as war minister and minister of interior with both the nation's army and police under his control.

German officials here included the German police and secret service heads, Rudolph Hess, Heinrich Himmler and Kurt Daluege. Everywhere jubilant Nazis were taking over control of provincial and municipal governments.

The government of Chancellor Schuschnigg and his fight for Austrian independence and against Nazism were gone, yielding to German pressure.

A regiment of German troops passed through Braunau, Hitler's birthplace. They stopped and paid touching, solemn obeisance at Hitler's house, their shrine. German planes circled above Austrian Linz.

The troops moved toward a Vienna bedecked with Nazi swastikas, and as they passed through small towns on the way they were greeted with cheers.

"Drip" With Swastikas

There was no indication anybody regretted their entrance. Seyss-Inquart had asked for them.

Resolutions of respect for the late Mrs. Charles W. Mead, a member of the grange for over 50 years, were adopted.

A lunch was served after the program by the home economics committee.

While the subordinate grange was holding its program, the Juvenile grange, in charge of Mrs. Alvin Carr, matron, and her assistant, Miss Florence Schnorrenberg, enjoyed a health program, opened by each member quoting a health rule. Miss Naomi Capel entertained with selections on her electric guitar.

Miss Edith Sanders presided at the business session, at which two new members were elected and initiated, and plans were laid for a program to be

WHAT!

Sen. Norris of Nebraska is talking about the administrative complications of Tennessee Valley Authority. What TVA needs, he says, is a board of "three executive businessmen." In his opinion they would do a better job than engineers, lawyers or "experts."

What! Businessmen in government? More business in public affairs? Not so much politics in business? What is this anyway... a flashback to the dark ages? Why, this is the first kind word for businessmen in half a decade.

Next thing you know, they'll be coming out of the doghouse to lie in the spring sunshine.

ON FORM

From a military point of view, the Spanish civil war should end this spring. The beginning of a major offensive movement by Gen. Franco's army this week is supposed to be the beginning of the end.

Military experts make their guesses on the outcome of a war strictly on form, which explains why they think Gen. Franco is going to win. He has better soldiers, better equipment, better officers.

The loyalists, though holding an apparent advantage in morale, never have been able to match the efficiency of the insurgents in the field. On form, they have been lucky to do as well as they have done.

The joker is, of course, that on form the insurgents should have won the war soon after they started it. They bogged down in the face of unexpected spirit. What happened once may happen again. It will be time enough to believe the Spanish civil war has ended when it ends.

DOUBT

Every time France has another cabinet crisis, Americans, who feel they hold a proprietary interest in the republic, have their doubts about parliamentary government. Perhaps it's suited to the French temperament, but is it suited to the needs of representative democracy?

The doubt grows deeper with the increasing prominence of the Communist party in French politics. It is no longer possible to assume that all parties in France are concerned fundamentally with preservation of the republic—that their leaders will fight like dogs and cats, but forget their differences and pull together to save the republic when a real crisis comes.

For real Communists are interested in revolution, not republics. Their object is to destroy, not to preserve. When they obtain political influence, as they have in France, they use it to weaken the system under which they were able to get it. Their doctrine makes it impossible for them to believe in moderation. If it be true, as dispatches hint it is, that the latest shuffle in France is for the purpose of easing out the Communists, thereby relieving the republic of an acute strain of anarchistic extremism, French politicians at last are showing some of the good sense they're expected to reveal in a crisis.

PUTTING IT BACK

There's almost a touch of whimsy in Treasury Secretary Morgenthau's terse insistence that congressmen put back all the revenue they're taking out of the administration's tax structure.

Until a number of weeks after March 15, the treasury won't know how much revenue is going to be obtained from 1937 operations. It hasn't the slightest idea how much could have been obtained in 1938 if no revision had been undertaken.

The fact remains, of course, that it is not sound financial policy to reduce revenue—even estimated revenue—at a time when government is piling up a deficit. The relationship between income and spending must be kept clear; heavier taxation is inevitable if the government is to maintain confidence in its financial responsibility.

The additional burden, however, it is now agreed, should not be placed where it will stifle income-producing enterprise, which is the indictment of the punitive corporation taxes now being revised. The purpose of tax legislation, in other words, should be maximum revenue with minimum effect on producers of the revenue, instead of the other way around, as some new dealers would like to do it for the sake of advancing their social reform program. There can be no social reform of any permanence unless the government's ability to retain both confidence and an adequate income is maintained.

There never has been a satisfactory clarification of federal policy in this matter. Ever since the beginning of deficit operations, the evil day of accounting has been shoved into the future. The present administration has experimented with the reform possibilities of taxation, but has failed to grapple directly with further revenue possibilities. Mr. McEwener, himself, never waited more hopefully for something to turn up.

Apparently, that still is the official attitude. Congress now is expected to adjourn early in June, unless new tax legislation interferes; but it does not intend to let anything interfere.

THE STARS SAY:

For Sunday, March 13

Sunday's horoscope is a rather difficult and confusing one, with much calling for good judgment, wise counsel and well-considered action. It stresses financial hazards, although there may be some other loss or bereavement that may cause much anxiety. There may be sudden changes and high expenditures involved.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a difficult year, with much financial jeopardy or enforced expenditures in meeting disturbed or devastating situations. There may be sudden disruption, with anxiety or sorrow regarding an elderly person. Be wary of strangers and prudent in managing all the affairs, particularly in money matters.

A child born on this day may be restless and probably erratic, although fond of making an attractive front and putting its best foot forward. It may have decided proclivities for shining socially, although its financial extravagance and reverses may not justify such indulgence.

For Monday, March 14

Monday's astrological forecast is for a particularly lively and probably strenuous day, with much concerning the launching of new and very important projects. These may be started with the solid in-dorsement and co-operation of big business interests. It is a time for cashing in on sound propositions of a bold or constructive character.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of high achievement in launching cherished projects of a meritorious and practical nature, with support assured from interested capital or big business.

A child born on this day may have fine creative ability and may be practical and aggressive as well, attracting solid support of large interests by its determination, sound projects and skill.

Jaster said that the national safety council estimated that every

ECZEMA

One of the most frequent and annoying inflammations of the skin met in early childhood is that condition known as "infantile eczema." I am glad to say that great progress has been made in the treatment of this stubborn disorder. Indeed, it is only within recent years that any degree of success has followed the treatment.

Eczema and other diseases of the skin are frequently caused by some personal peculiarity, sensitivity or "allergy," as the doctors call it. There is probably a sensitivity to certain food substances. As a rule, these foods are protein in their nature. The condition occurs in bottled infants more frequently than in those who are breast-fed. But it does also occur in breast-fed children, particularly in the offspring of mothers who likewise have some allergic sensitivity. Since asthma and hay fever, as well as eczema, are now regarded as symptoms of allergy, it is important that the children of parents who have some form of these diseases be guarded against similar allergic weaknesses.

Find Offending Food
The young sufferer is unpleasantly susceptible to one of such protein foods as milk, cereals and eggs. It is necessary to find out which one, and have that article omitted from the diet. There should be no wholesale restriction of foods. There are tests that are used to find the offending food. They should be made. Eggs are important in all infant diets, but they should be used with caution and preferably after the first year.

To make certain that the child receives adequate amounts of vitamins, A, B and D, orange and tomato juice and cod liver oil may be given. If the child seriously objects to these substances, pineapple juice or carotene oil may be substituted.

Clothing, Too
Special attention should be given to the child's clothing. It should be as free from those substances that are irritating to a sensitive child. Some experimentation must be employed to see if silk, wool, furs, hairs, feathers or some other article of clothing is responsible for trouble. If there is doubt, the child should be dressed in cotton clothing and the bedding should be made of "non-allergic" material.

The skin eruptions of eczema require medical attention. Do not apply an ointment merely because some well-meaning friend has had success with it and recommends it. Bear in mind that what is good for one individual may be detrimental to another.

Do not be alarmed about the condition but give it wise attention. Remember that it is a persistent disorder, requiring prolonged care and attention. It is not contagious and cannot be spread from one child to another.

"Women In Love" by May Christie

CHAPTER XXIX

Satisfied with her handiwork, Brenda Selz gave further money to the story via the grapevine system. It was speedily bruited around the three thousand employees that Ann was to be fired for taking graft!

"I hate New York with all my heart and soul!" said Gordon Galt.

He had enjoyed an excellent dinner cooked by Renita Parrish in her apartment down in Greenwich Village. Now he was reclining in an easy chair by the open window, staring moodily at the Wall Street skyscrapers.

"What you want is a Scotch highball. I'll fix one for you," said the eager hostess. "I'm permanently on the wagon, but a tired man needs his little drink."

She thought of everything. His favorite dishes. Even the expensive brand of imported cigarettes he used to indulge in, in his Harvard days. The little apartment was full of the scent of lilac. Great bunches of it were stacked about the living room because he had once told her that he loved it. But he had forgotten that now.

For as he looked across the chimney pots at what had once been the world's financial market, his father's suicide, his own ill-luck rose before him. He brooded on the days that never would return.

"I loathe New York!" he repeated, when Renita came out of the kitchenette carrying a tray on which was a bottle, a soda siphon, some ice cubes, and a long glass. She set the tray beside him.

"You're all tired out with the difficult mental work of yours. I always say that the advertising is the hardest part of the business. Buying and selling are child's play. Gordon, compared to what you're doing, I just can't think how you can dig up so many clever things to write about!"

Over and over—that's the trouble!" he groaned. "Bradley turned down my copy this morning, and I had to do it all over. It is so damned monotonous, shut up in a cell no bigger than a dog's kennel, trying to wax lyrical over step-ins and pink panties, and heaven knows what I'm sick of it!"

"They work you too hard!"

All day, like a machine! Why, an English professor in Harvard told us that no writer can work more than three hours a day if he's to turn out good stuff."

"Why don't you tell that to Simon?"—Simon was the head of the Advertising—or to Paul Bradley?

"They'd boot me out!"

"No fear!"

Don't be too sure. I just took another cut in salary. They raised Parker Parker was a younger copy writer. "It won't be a cut the first time. It'll be the sweet Spring air."

Renita was thinking rapidly. She had a wonderful idea regarding Gordon. How to break it to him? How would he receive it? Would he turn it down?

But his professed hatred for New York and all appertaining to it gave her courage. Wait till he had his highball. Then spring it.

He drank.

"Swell stuff, Renita. The smoky taste of Old Scotland!"

He poured himself a second glass. "Won't you have one?" he asked her. He hoped that she wouldn't. A fellow wouldn't want to be responsible for putting her back on that road again. She was too good a scout.

"No, thanks, Gordon. I'm a reformed rake, you know. I'm going to stay reformed."

"You're a swell egg, Renita." Over the rim of his glass he nodded at her, glad of her attitude to her late weakness. It was wonderful to think of the fight she'd put up.

She looked stunning tonight, in those turquoise satin pajamas with the rose velvet collar. It was an absurd theory that a red-headed girl must avoid pink colors. With Renita's white skin and blue-green eyes, rose was a lovely shade for her. He told her so.

"Thanks for the compliment," she smiled, showing white teeth. "Myself, I thought it was a bit too bright."

"I like gaiety and color."

"And you haven't had too much of the first in the past many months! Have you?" she ventured.

"I'll say I have not!"

Then he felt ashamed of whining to Renita, for wasn't her own lot as difficult as his own? It was always harder for a woman to buck the world, especially when she was unprotected. The Scotch was mounting, giving him a warm and sympathetic feeling. "Life isn't so easy for you either."

There was a pause.

He stared out over the roofs of Greenwich Village to Wall Street's skyscrapers. "Nor for my father," he added.

"He's out of all the worrying, anyhow," Renita said softly, deeply touched.

"And the loneliness," said Gordon. A mist came to his eyes. "Nobody in this town wants a chap without money. Dad found that out before I did!"

It was all she could do to keep from telling him that there was one person who wanted him, one true friend to whom his lack of money mattered not at all.

But because she loved this boy so terribly, she dare not risk rebuff from him. Dare not disrupt the poignant intimacy of this moment.

"I guess," said Gordon out of a long silence, "that you're often about as solitary as I am, living alone as you do. Life's a big joke anyway. Or like an ugly fever. If it weren't for some queer scruple, or maybe it's a forlorn hope of something brighter, I'd end it all tomorrow. And believe me, nobody would shed tears over me!"

"Listen, Gordon, you've a swell future before you if you'll only take the first step." Her eyes were bright with promise. She leaned towards Gordon. "I've been waiting to tell you all evening of an offer I have to go out to Denver and manage a little chain store—for dresses only—and bring my own advertising writer. They only need one man to tackle the advertising, Gordon, so you'd be your own boss, you noyance, neither Herman Weiss nor his merchandise-manager had instructed the cashier about Ann.

"But the day's young yet," thought Brenda, as she went back to her department on the main floor.

Renita Parrish passed. A radiant Renita, with Gordon Gavin's signet ring on the third finger of her left hand. Brenda smiled acidly as she congratulated her.

Renita was so happy that she good-naturedly returned Brenda's smile.

"Why don't you go and do likewise, Brenda?" she asked.

Brenda was nettled. Did they think she was past her best, these girls? "Believe me, when I marry it'll be someone with money," she said sharply.

Renita went to the Lingerie department to see Ann. They must decide on the bridesmaid's outfit. Miss Shellfish had lovely, Spring-like dresses in starched chiffon—a new consignment in this morning—Ann might select one at a liberal discount.

"We'll drop in at the Fashion Show this afternoon in the Misses' Dress," said Ann. "I've a model showing lingerie and negligees. Meet me there at three, will you, Renita?"

"Right." She drew closer to Ann. Lowering her voice she asked her what on earth the rumors flying round the store meant? It wasn't possible that because the other had had to take a mark-down in some merchandise, she'd been asked to resign from her job? Impossible!

EXPENSES HIGH IN "DEATH ROW"

Anna Marie Hahn Most Expensive Prisoner in the State

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, March 12.—Condemned murderers in Ohio penitentiary's "death row" cost the state six times as much as the same number of other inmates in the prison.

Welfare department statistics show that the cost of maintaining the average prisoner in Ohio's "big house" last year was $19 a month, while the death row inmates cost more than $115, each, principally because of additional guards required.

Mrs. Hahn Most Expensive

Mrs. Anna Marie Hahn, convicted Cincinnati poison slayer, is by far the most expensive prisoner in the state.

Mrs. Margaret Allman, state welfare director, said that the three matrons constantly watching the death row's only woman inmate, are paid a total of $300 a month.

One guard is sufficient to watch the other 10 inmates, prison officials said.

"From the time prisoners enter the death row they are constantly guarded," said Warden James C. Woodward.

"They are permitted to see their attorneys and relatives at nearly any time of the day, and this requires additional service of guards. One guard is always on duty in death row."

"Death row prisoners are given the same food as other prison inmates," said Mrs. Allman.

"I believe, however, before Mrs. Hahn was moved into the state's recently constructed death row, she was given hospital care."

Mrs. Hahn was confined in a specially-built cell in the hospital building before new quarters were provided for all death row inmates.

All They Ask For

"The only exception in the food supplied death row inmates is the last meal, when every effort is made to give the doomed person everything and anything to eat he desires," said Mrs. Allman.

The greatest single cost to the state comes at the end of that brief period when the prisoner walks the "last mile" from his cell to the electric chair. He is permitted to make a statement, if he chooses, then guards hastily strap him in the chair, and the warden's death signal costs the state $50 as another killer's life is taken. "The $50 fee is divided among the three guards who throw the lethal switches, although the state provides that the warden shall receive it," Mrs. Allman said.

HITLER BEGINS VIENNA MARCH

German Leader Expected To Reach Capital of State Tonight

The villages dripped with swastika flags.

And as the German troops came, another army, too, was marching into Austria — the thousands of Austrian Legion men who fled the nation in 1934 after the failure of Nazi revolt in which Chancellor Dollfus was killed.

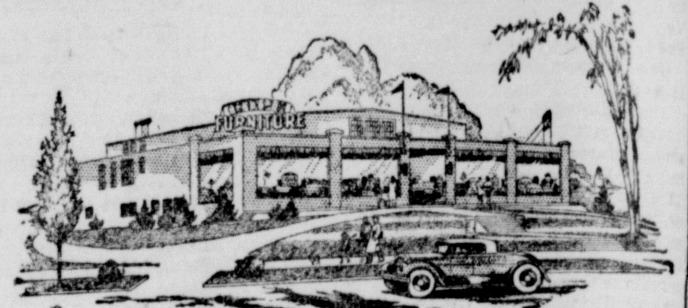

Meetings started early in the provincial capitals to reorganize provincial governments in 100 per cent Nazi fashion beginning with provincial governors and working down.

In Styria province, with its capital of Graz the center of Nazi strength in forcing the bloodless revolution, this business was completed quickly. Hans Heilrich was named governor and a storm troop battalion leader became police chief.

Services In Our Churches

"Far From Home" Pastor's Topic At Emmanuel Lutheran

Rev. John Bauman, pastor of the Emmanuel Lutheran church, 291 S. Broadway, will preach at the divine worship service at 10 a. m. Sunday on the second sermon topic in a series on "Dead and Alive, Lost and Found." The sermon theme for Sunday will be "Far From Home."

The Sunday school classes for all ages meet at 9 a. m., with Lee Schaefer as superintendent.

Rev. Bauman points out that on the Mount of Transfiguration St. Peter said: "It is good to be here." We feel like saying the same last Sunday at our worship service. The angels were near to God as the large congregation sang "Jesus Lover of My Soul." The attention given the sermon, in which he pondered the empty theme "Disatisfied at Home" is inspiring. The beautiful anthem by the choir was heart-touching. We all felt like saying with St. Peter, "It is good to be here."

German services will be held at 11 a. m.

Thought For Lent

Lent points to more than personal introspection and teaches more than the lesson of patience. The suffering Savior under the burden of the cross is going the path of highest duty. His crucifixion and death were the culmination of His redemptive work. For this He was appointed, and His earthly life could not have been complete nor His mission fulfilled until the redemption of mankind was completed. His name was Jesus and He should save His people from their sins. That, among all the great number of duties which beset His life, was the chiefest. It was the one through which He especially glorified the Father.

"Such does Lent portray. It presents to our path along which we go to do the will of God. Human life is a succession of duties the sum of which resolves itself into glorifying God and thus reaching the highest purpose of our life. Like unto the Savior's, our duty may require cross bearing, rejection by man, yet even death. Difficult to contemplate, more so to carry out. Yet 'hereby is my Father glorified,' says Jesus. What an example He has left us that we should follow after Him."

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "If then God so clothe the grass, which is to day in the field, and tomorrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith? Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom" (Luke 12:28-32).

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "In the scientific relation of God to man, we find that whatever blesses one blesses all, as Jesus showed with the loaves and the fishes—Spirit, not matter, being the source of supply." (p. 206).

English Lutheran Sermon Topic For Tomorrow Listed

"The Cross, a Stumbling Block" is the theme which Rev. George D. Keister has taken for his sermon at the morning worship service of the Holy Trinity English Lutheran church tomorrow, the second Sunday in Lent or Reminiscere.

Complete services and announcements are as follows:

Sunday school, 9:45—St. Mark 6:30-44; Charles W. Youtz, supt.

Jesus does make provision for the needs of humanity. He fed the hungry when he performed the miracle of increasing the loaves and fishes. He restored to health many people who were sick and had been pronounced incurable. He comforted those who were grief-stricken and disheartened. However the most important needs that Jesus supplied were the wants of the souls or spirits of man. The hungry hearts that longed for hope and cried for release from sin's seductive snare were readily helped by the Master. Physical needs are supplied by the grace and love of God and spiritual necessities come from His thoughtful Providence.

Morning worship 11—Sermon.

Lent is not a time to fulfill religious obligations for the year. There is a great deal of legalism in observing Lent. Some keep it as a kind of balm for a guilty conscience. Some persons are carried away in these days by the mad rush of society, business and other worldliness, and welcome Lent as a time when they can make amends. This kind of keeping Lent is the merest foolishness. Lent is not a time to pacify a guilty conscience but a time to deepen religious convictions and heighten Christian "joy and peace." We know that it is not a formality, but a sincerity that pleases God.

"I know not how that Calvary's Cross

A world from sin could free:

I only know it's matchless love

Has brought God's love to me."

QUAKERS MEET ST. VINCENT IN TOURNEY TONIGHT

Overconfidence Feared As Brown's Quintet Bids For Another Trip To Columbus

Akron St. Vincent Expected To Present Quakers With Stiff Opposition In Finals of Northeastern Ohio Tourney at Goodyear Gym

Two obstacles stood ready today to block Coach Herb Brown's Salem High school Quakers in their attempt to reach the finals of the Ohio scholastic basketball tournament for the second straight year. One is Akron St. Vincent; the other, overconfidence.

The Quakers will attempt to clear both barriers at 7 o'clock tonight when they meet St. Vincent's Green Wave in the finals of the district eliminations at Goodyear gymnasium in Akron. A victory over the Saints would give the Quakers a clear path to the state finals at Columbus next week.

By far the more dangerous of the two obstacles is overconfidence, which it is feared, worked itself into the Quakers' presence Thursday night after their startling upset victory over Akron North, champion of the Rubber City and one of the leading pre-tournament favorites for the state championship.

The Quakers turned in a great performance in eliminating the Akron city champions from the district tourney and many of their followers fear they will overtake the potential strength of St. Vincent's team in view of their own impressive showing against North's highly-rated outfit.

St. Vincent will be anything but an easy opponent for the Quakers. The Saints saw the Red and Black jabs play against North Thursday night, discovered at this time several weak spots in Salem's play and are set to hand the Quakers a trimming to preserve Akron prestige in tournament play.

As additional incentive, St. Vincent will be seeking its first trip to the state finals in several years and undoubtedly will battle every inch of the way to gain this goal now that it is within arm's reach.

The Saints employ a man-to-man defense and will not offer the Quakers the opportunity to do as much unmolested mid-court ball-handling and passing as they did against North's zone defense.

Coach Brown will probably alter his offensive style to allow for the change in the opponents' defense. His most likely move will be to switch Max Lutsch back to the pivot position.

Lutsch worked from the corner of the floor on offense during the Akron North game. Bill Schaeffer, who worked at a swivel post during the regular season, but was switched to a corner position during the Youngstown tournament, may also come back to the pivot.

No change is likely for the Quakers' lineup. Jim Dickey, who played a whole of a defense game against North, and Ollie Olexa are slated to get the call at the forward berths. Lutsch is figured to start at center and Schaeffer and Gilbert Everhart will be back at the guard positions.

The St. Vincent starting lineup will probably have Whelton and Schubert at forwards, Graf at center and Mundy and Gifford at guards. Gifford, a southpaw dribbler and ball handler, is the key man in the Saints' offensive attack, bringing the ball down the floor and starting practically all of the plays.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

By EDDIE BRIETZ
NEW YORK, March 12.—Believe it or not, but the court jester, Al Schacht, figures to be the highest paid performer in baseball this year. He has a book full of major and minor league dates which should gross him more than $50 grand.

Johnny Cooney swears that if the Cards let him go he won't play with any minor league club except Hollywood in the Coast League.

Minnesota fans are howling their heads off because we did not say anything about the "Gopher" basketball team knocking off nine straight wins after dropping three in a row.

Just put it down as a "brietz of etiquette." Hank Gowdy, veteran coach of the Cincinnati Reds, is feeling his years. He tried to lunge around the half mile track at the Red's Tampa training camp the other day and barely made it.

Glenn Cunningham, the country's No. 1 runner (in our book) will be guest speaker at the Broadway Temple Methodist church tomorrow night. Glenn is an old pal of the preacher's.

Larry MacPhail has done more to strengthen the Dodgers in two months than all the directors did in two years. Stanislav Zbyszko, the old wrestler, who has been cleaning up in South America, makes his bow as a big time promoter in two weeks when he presents Bob Gregory (the married that far east princess) at the garden.

J. Curtis Sanford (and friends) have the dough, all right, but that talk from Dallas about their buying the Dodgers seems to be mostly talk. How wrestling has hit the skids! — four years ago Jim London and Jim McMiller packed 26,000 people into the garden. The other night the best they could do was 5,000 at the Hippodrome.

FEW ATHLETES FOUND TO HAVE INJURED HEART

Research at Minnesota U. Indicates New Basketball Speedup Harmless

MINNEAPOLIS, March 12.—Eldon, Minn., is an athlete injured permanently by college sports, according to Dr. Ansel Keys, head of a group of University of Minnesota scientists studying the effects of athletics on humans.

Asked about the recently inaugurated rule which eliminates the center jump in basketball, Dr. Keys said:

"Most of the talk about jumpy basketball being more injurious to college players than the game with the center jump is bunk."

"The hearts of most persons who have lived normal athletic lives are sound enough not to be overworked. The type of game played makes more difference in basketball than the rules. For instance, not long ago Indiana came up here and played a slow, piddling game without the center jump."

Dr. Keys, who has made an intensive study of the jumpy court game, disagreed with a Midwest physician who sought to show the new rule made the game injurious to players by measuring basketball players' pulse beats and discovering them to be 100 strokes a minute or more.

"The pulse beat of an athlete," Dr. Keys said, "may go to 180 or 200 without being dangerous."

The scientist, now working on measurements of hearts in both athletes and non-athletes, declared that specialists should differentiate between merely an enlarged heart and a dilated heart when they talk about "athlete's heart."

"If a heart is large merely because of muscular tissue, it is an asset instead of a liability," he pointed out. "It has been built up by exercise so that instead of putting out four quarts of blood a minute, as during normal circulation, it can put out 25, as is possible in extreme exercise."

"But unimpaired hearts, on the other hand, must stretch for such a stroke volume, causing dilation and permanent injury."

He explained that muscles or organs must be built for exercise. After slamming the ball across from third to first base the first day of the season, a baseball player may wake up the next morning with a sore arm. But a rest will heal it.

Only when a great, sudden exertion by a person who hasn't previously been very athletic destroys muscular tissue is there likely to be permanent injury, Dr. Keys said.

He said that key points of fatigue vary with various sports. An athlete runs out of fuel in the 26-mile marathon, for example, and in mountaineering and channel swimming.

"This means," Dr. Keys said, "that the high school athlete who chews on a hunk of candy before a swimming race to get more energy is fooling himself. For one thing he doesn't need the fuel. And then again the diversion of the blood to the stomach to digest the candy takes the blood from organs which need it for the race."

TIGERS EXPECT PITCHING STAFF TO TOP LEAGUE

Schoolboy Rowe's Failure Probably Would Not Affect Corps

NEW YORK, March 12.—Baseball's armchair pilots sadly predict that the pennant hopes of the Detroit Tigers rely on the doubtful return to form of pitcher Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe. But Manager Mickey Cochrane and Company point to the nine other pitchers listed on their roster for 1938, cross their fingers and chorus, "There's our flag!"

Taking Cochrane at his word, a survey of the present pitching lineup, with a nucleus of four veterans, shows that even if Rowe does fail, the Detroiters' hurling corps shape up as one of the strongest in the American League.

Right-handed Elden Auker and Roxie Lawson top the quartet on the basis of the averages. Auker, who won 17 and lost 9 last year, topped the staff in the earned run ratings with a mark of 3.88. Lawson, with 18 wins against 7 defeats, had the highest percentage with .720.

The slender veteran, Tommy Bridges, and Vernon Kennedy, former ranking righthander of the Chicago White Sox, complete the Big Four. In 1937 Bridges had one of his poorest seasons in his eight years with the Tigers. He won 15 and lost 12 and finished 18th in league earned run ratings.

Kennedy, for whom Cochrane traded the popular Gerald Walker and subsequently weathered a storm of abuse from irate Detroit fans, should easily be one of the best pitchers in the loop. In his freshman year with the White Sox, he won 11 games and during the next season—1936—was a sensation. He won 21 and lost 9, to finish second to Bridges in the "games won" column.

Not grouped as established veterans but nevertheless among the more experienced hurlers are George Coffman, George Gill, Cletus Poffenberger and Jake Wade. Gill turned in 11 victories to top the group and should be a potent factor in the Tiger drive. Poffenberger, who is already listed among the Tiger holdouts, won 10 and lost 5 after joining the club in June. His admittedly good work last year made him certain of a starting position.

Wade and Coffman each won 7 games. Wade's chief claim to fame is his one-hit, 1-0 victory over Johnny Allen in the last game of the season in 1937. Allen had won 15 straight and was attempting to break the league's consecutive victory record when he was halted by Wade's brilliant effort.

Coffman, brought from Toledo, shows definite starting ability but will probably be assigned to relief roles for another season.

Several rookies will be on hand at the Tigers' spring training camp, the most promising of whom appear to be: Al Benton, a right-hander from Memphis, with an earned run mark of 2.84, and Joe Rogalski, another righthander from

ST. PAUL CLUB GOLF'S CRADLE IN HINTERLAND

Sports Organization Set Up In 1888, Course Opened In 1893

ST. PAUL, March 12.—The oldest American golf club west of New Jersey, according to its claims, has observed its 50th anniversary. It is the St. Paul Carnival club, now known as the St. Paul Town and Country club. Its present existence is secure, but on three occasions it was saved by a French chef, a newspaper man and a bicycle fad.

Now a large sporting plant on the eastern banks of the Mississippi river, bordering Minneapolis, it started as the precarious project of a dozen impecunious if exclusive young men in 1888. They thought the other St. Paul carnival clubs too flashy.

For five years they contrived to raise enough money to support their club, retain their French chef and keep the grounds reasonably clear of cattle and sheep. The chef's ingenuity and fame helped greatly.

During that time the club expanded, raised $25,000 from members through bonds and even resorted, according to a newspaper, to installation of "a bowling alley, a shuffleboard, a billiard table and a half dozen of the fool games with which the English and the Canadians fill their country clubs and seem to enjoy."

Even the games failed until the membership chairman acquainted cyclists with the pleasures of the byways leading to the club grounds. Membership boomed for a time.

In June, 1893, as the club waned, a young man, assigned against his wishes to cover society for a newspaper, heard one of the club's organizers mention readings about a game called golf. The reporter related at great length the club's plans for starting a golf course.

A Scotchman read the item. He talked the club into adopting his native sport. With the aid of a lawmower, members laid out a nine-hole course.

Members boasted that the course was neat and free of obstacles. An obstacle they overlooked was the cattle which grazed on the fairways. Caddies doubled as cattle herders. Tomato cans served for holes. Red rags tied to fish poles were the markers.

Transues Drop Demings, 40-38

The Transue-Williams five from Alliance came from behind after trailing for three quarters and beat the Deming team, 40-38, in a basketball game played Friday in the Memorial building.

Hakdet was high point man for the visitors, sinking eight baskets, besides nabbing seven extra points on fouls. Courtney, with 15 points, was high for the Deming quintet.

LEAGUE QUINTS PLAY FOR CITY TITLES MONDAY

Four Circuits To Start Championship Series At Memorial

Play-offs for season's championships in city basketball leagues directed by Joe Kelley will get under way at the Memorial building gym Monday night with first and second half winners in four different circuits clashing in opening games.

The play-offs, which will be held in the Class A, Class B, Class C and Mickey McGuire leagues, will be two-out-of-three-game affairs. The second games of the title series will be played on Tuesday night, while third games, if necessary in any leagues, will be held Monday, March 21.

On next Monday and Tuesday nights of next week, the Mickey McGuire league's game will open the all-championship program at 6 o'clock. Meeting in the second game each night at 6:45 will be the contenders for the Class C title.

The Class B league play-off games will be followed by the Class A games at 8:30.

Clashing in the Class A loop's championship series will be the Shaeten Sinclair Service Station quintet and the Althouse Dodgers. Both teams boast lineups of well-experienced cagers, some of whom are former high school and college stars.

The Sinclairs won the first half championship of the senior circuit, winning eight games and losing only one. The Dodgers captured the second half title with a similar record.

The Columbians and 1937-38 champions of the Class B league, the junior circuit's first half title, while the latter finished on top in the second half.

In the Class C league, which is composed of church league teams made up of boys under 16 years of age, the Methodists and Baptists will meet in the play-off. The M. E. team is the first half champion and the Baptists the second half winner.

Prospect and McKinley will battle in the first game of the championship series in the Mickey McGuire league for grade school teams. Prospect won the first round title in the school loop, while McKinley copped the second round championship.

A third team may become involved in the McGuire loop play-off if Reilly defeats McKinley at the Memorial building today. A win for Reilly's basketballers would give them the third round championship in the grade school circuit.

Gov. Martin L. Davey

Flat denial of charges that he had figured in a deal to obtain campaign contributions from several manufacturers was made by Martin L. Davey, governor of Ohio when he testified in Cleveland above. His testimony came during course of a trial of Lee Bradley, former Davey employee and alleged political contact man, who is charged by Davey with perjury in asserting before an Ohio senate investigating committee that campaign contributions had been sought from various companies.

Finances Cause New French Political Crisis

Chamber of deputies

Fall of the franc to a new 12-year low and the necessity of floating a new half-billion-dollar loan for defense needs were financial problems which provoked a new crisis in the French government. Principals involved in the situation were Camille Chautemps, premier who resigned because of Left Wing opposition to granting him decree powers over national finances; Leon Blum, former Socialist premier called to head a new cabinet, and President Albert Lebrun. The situation was made further acute by division of opinion in government circles as to whether France should follow England's lead in making a "deal" with Germany and Italy.

Theater Attractions

Alice Faye, Joan Davis and Marjorie Weaver in a scene from "Sally, Irene and Mary," musical attraction at the State theater Sunday through Tuesday.

Four pictures make up next week's program at the State, opening Sunday with "Sally, Irene and Mary," a musical, which will conclude Tuesday. Alice Faye, Joan Davis and Marjorie Weaver have the title roles in the picture which also features Tony Martin, Gregory Ratoff, Fred Allen, Louise Hovick, Barnett Parker and J. Edward Bromberg.

A double bill is scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday at the State. Number 1 feature is a horror film, "The Invisible Menace," with Boris Karloff in the leading role. Taffy-haired Marie Wilson and Eddie Craven have featured parts.

Romantic Comedy
The other half of the bill is a romantic comedy, "Thrill of a Lifetime." The large cast of musical and comedy players includes the Yacht Club Boys, Judy Canova, Ben Blue, Eleanor Whitney, Johnny Downs, Betty Grable, Larry Crabbe, Left Erikson, Panchonettes and Dorothy Lamour.

Friday and Saturday State theater patrons will see the delightful comedy, "The Baroness and the Butler," featuring Annabella, English star last seen here in "Wings of the Morning," and William Powell, Helen Westley, Henry Stephenson, Joseph Schildkraut, J. Edward Bromberg, Nigel Bruce and Lynn Bari are seen in the picture.

The dramatic film, "Of Human Hearts," with Walter Huston, Beulah Bondi, James Stewart and Ann Rutherford concludes tonight at the State theater.

Joe Brown Booked
Joe E. Brown has Lyda Roberti, Jane Wyman and Barbara Pepper as leading ladies in "Wide Open Faces" which plays at the Grand Sunday through Tuesday. On that bill is an additional feature, "Wee, Wee, Monsieur," starring the Three Stooges.

The Grand also features two films Wednesday and Thursday. The first is a comedy, "No Time to Marry," with Richard Arlen, Mary Astor and Lionel Stander and the second a western, "Rolling Caravans," with John Loden and Eleanor Stewart.

The Grand program next week concludes with "Hawaiian Buckaroo" featuring Smith Ballew, singing cowboy, and Evelyn Knapp. The picture shows Friday and Saturday.

The Grand picture, "Sudden Bill Dorn," with Buck Jones in the title role, will be seen at the Grand for the last times tonight.

most disturbing effect on Anglo-German relations and on public confidence throughout Europe.

Keeping In Touch

"His Majesty's government are keeping in closest touch with the French government and giving continuous consideration to the situation."

"The ministers are remaining within reach of London over the weekend and it is understood the cabinet will in any case meet again Monday."

Germany's forceful Nazification of Austria had upset all plans for ensuring European peace through speedy diplomatic negotiations.

Both Britain and France fired strong protests to Berlin against Germany's domineering tactics, but neither France nor Great Britain gave the slightest indication of intending to take military action to restrain Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

The abrupt transformation of Austria into a 100 per cent Nazi state was generally regarded as an accomplished fact.

France, caught in a helpless condition because of governmental disorganization and a destructive factional wrangle between political parties, was particularly concerned over the safety of her trusted democratic ally, Czechoslovakia.
